September 5th, 2014

London, United Kingdom

Surrender your soul.... Unlock an eternity.

Venture into a perilous realm where wonder, beauty and fear combine in a windowless world of souls. Navigate the nine levels of Mictlan, the Aztec Underworld, and face the formidable trials of life-after-death beneath the Earth. Indigenous and Mexican cultures unite in this immersive Day of the Dead inspired experience.

About Las Maravillas

Las Maravillas is a unique experience, proudly featured in the London Horror Festival's official program. Performances will be held from October 28th to November 1st in the basement of the Rose Lipman Building in Hackney. The Dreamery is interested not only in looking at the fusion of art and culture between contemporary Mexico and its Indigenous heritage, but to provide a true experience for its audiences this Halloween season.

Audiences will take the place of souls and navigate the nine levels of the Aztec Underworld, otherwise known as Mictlan. The audience will make their way through nine distinct spaces representing the different levels of the region of Death. On their journey they will interact with actors and dancers who will encourage them to discover their surroundings, and to play and interact with the set. Visitors will learn more about the various aspects and traditions associated with the Aztec belief in the afterlife before emerging back out in the ordinary and familiar world that they came from.

The essence of this production is to create a fully immersive environment for an audience to explore, observe and participate in. The Dreamery's utmost goal is to inspire and create a visceral experience for each member of the audience, calling upon their psychology and their innate reactions to external stimuli in order to provoke a variety of emotions and actions.
